DRÔLE D'IMPRESSION
The Mural

Drôle d'impression, from photography to street theatre

Two bill posters are pasting a photographic mural on a wall.

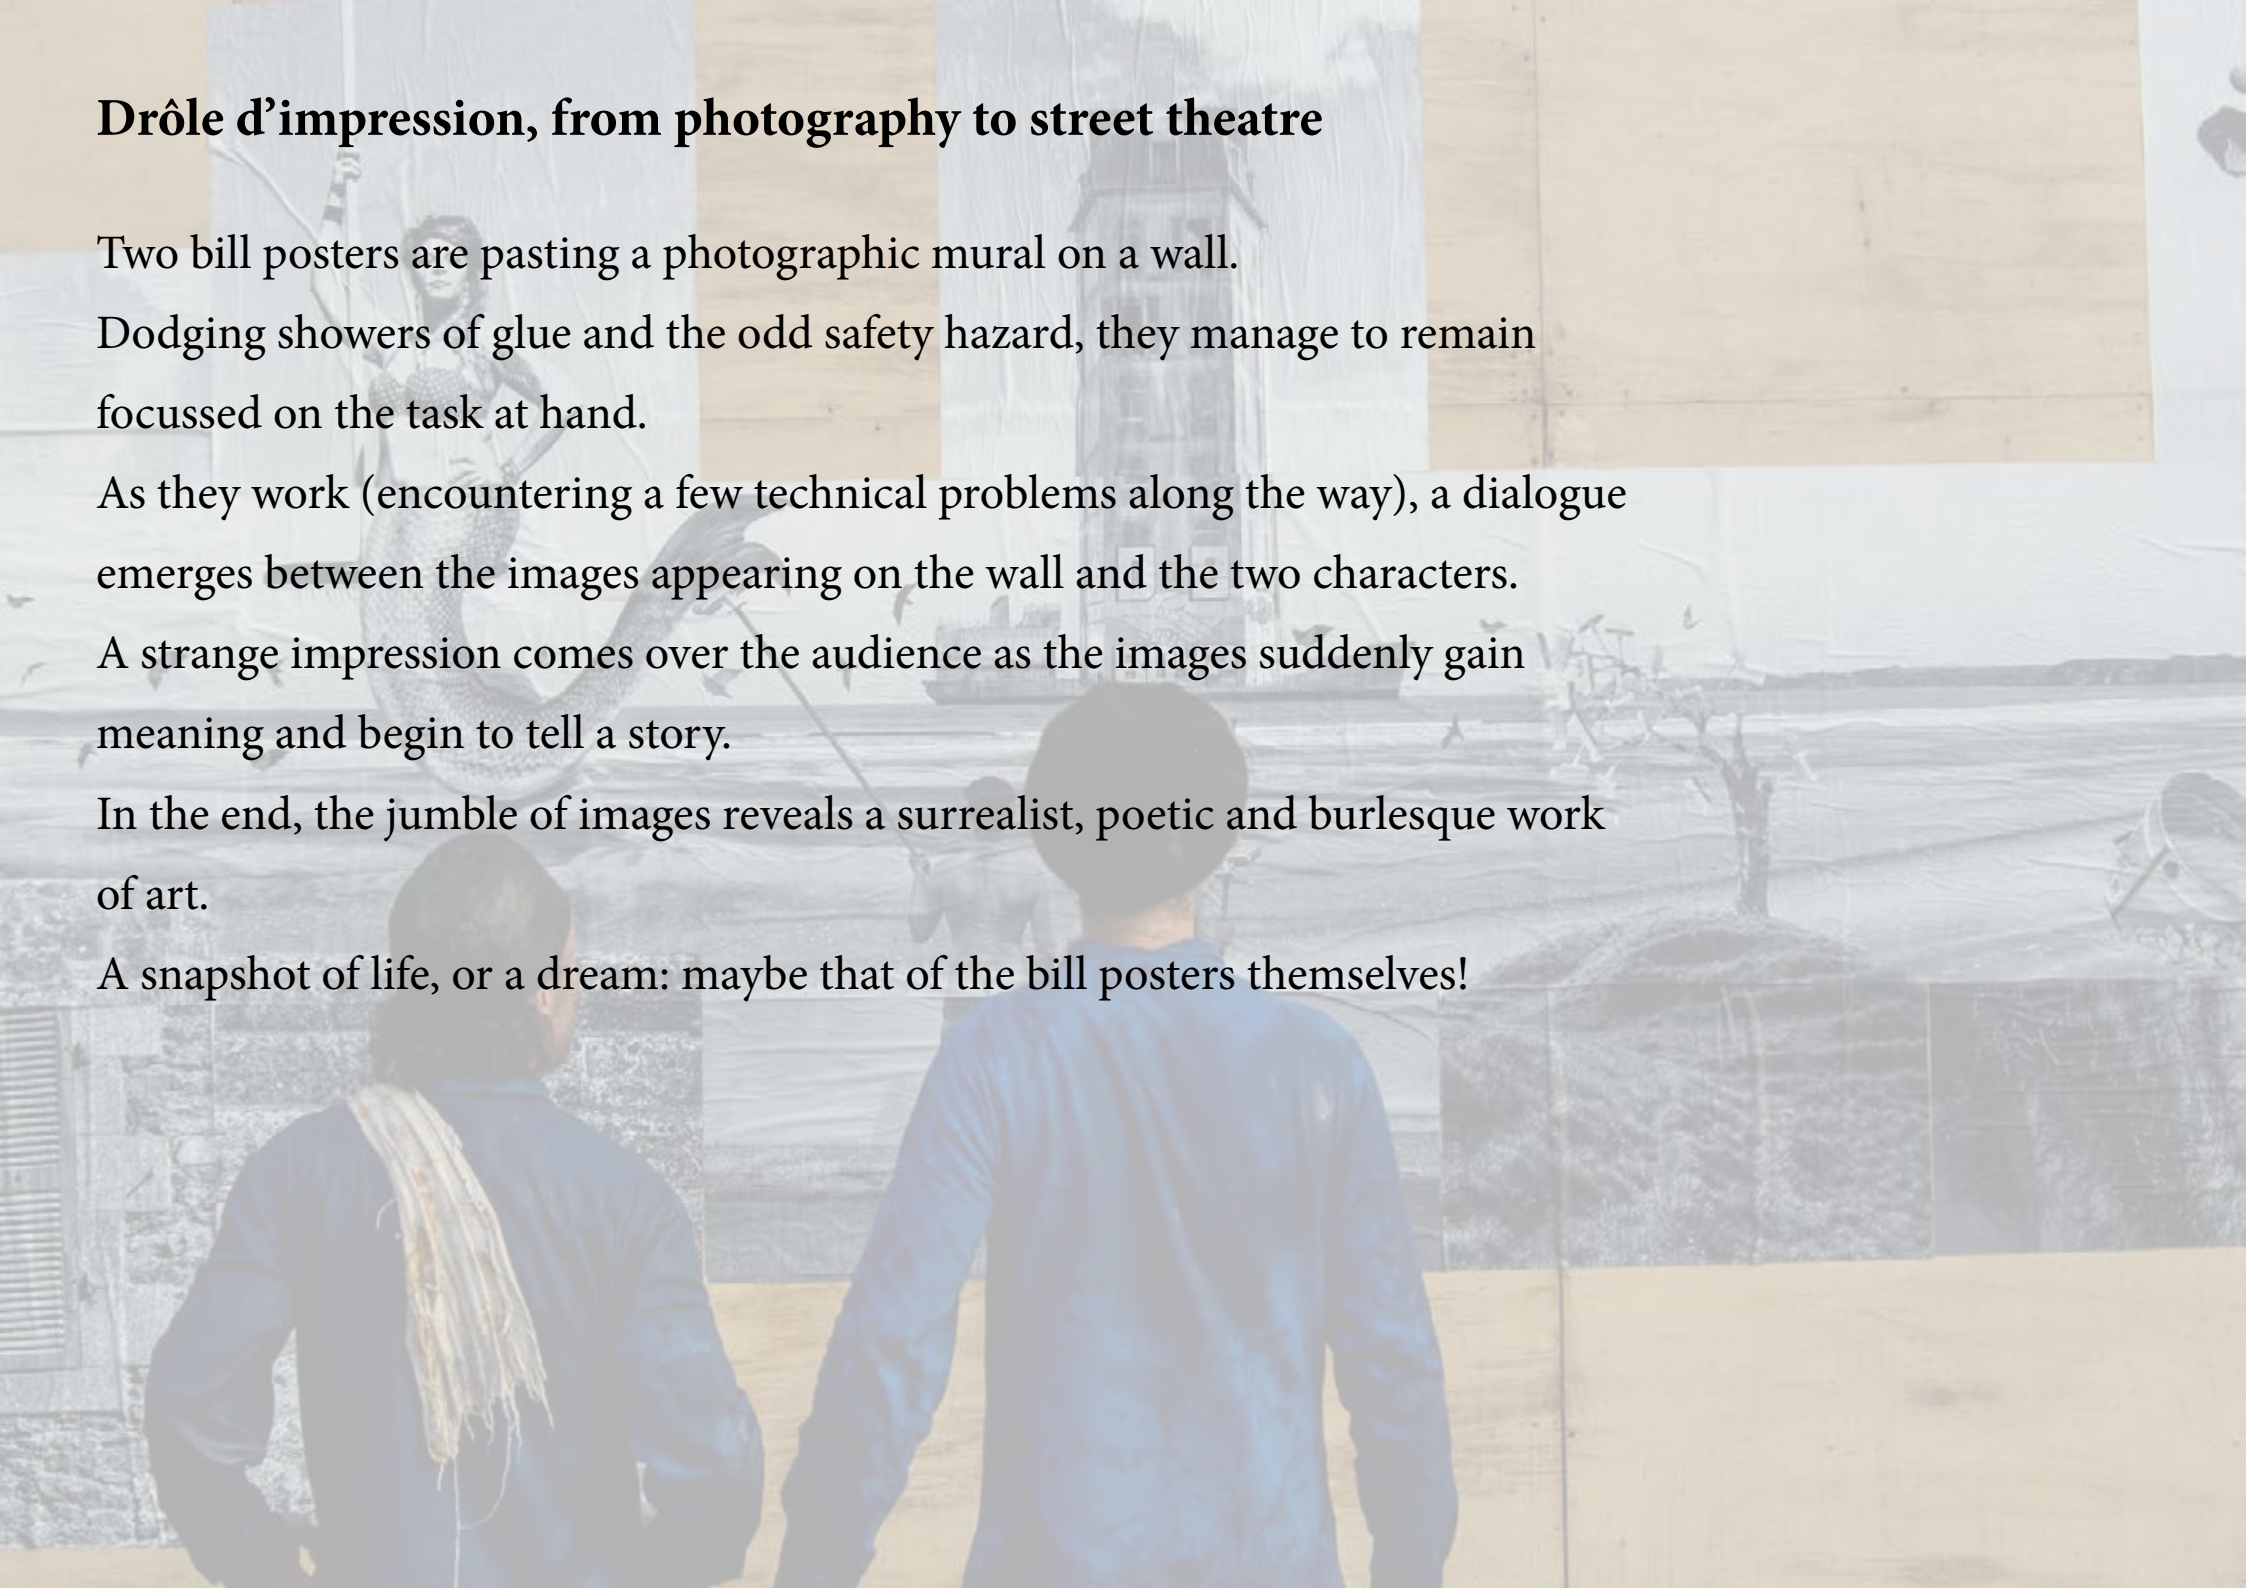

Dodging showers of glue and the odd safety hazard, they manage to remain focussed on the task at hand.

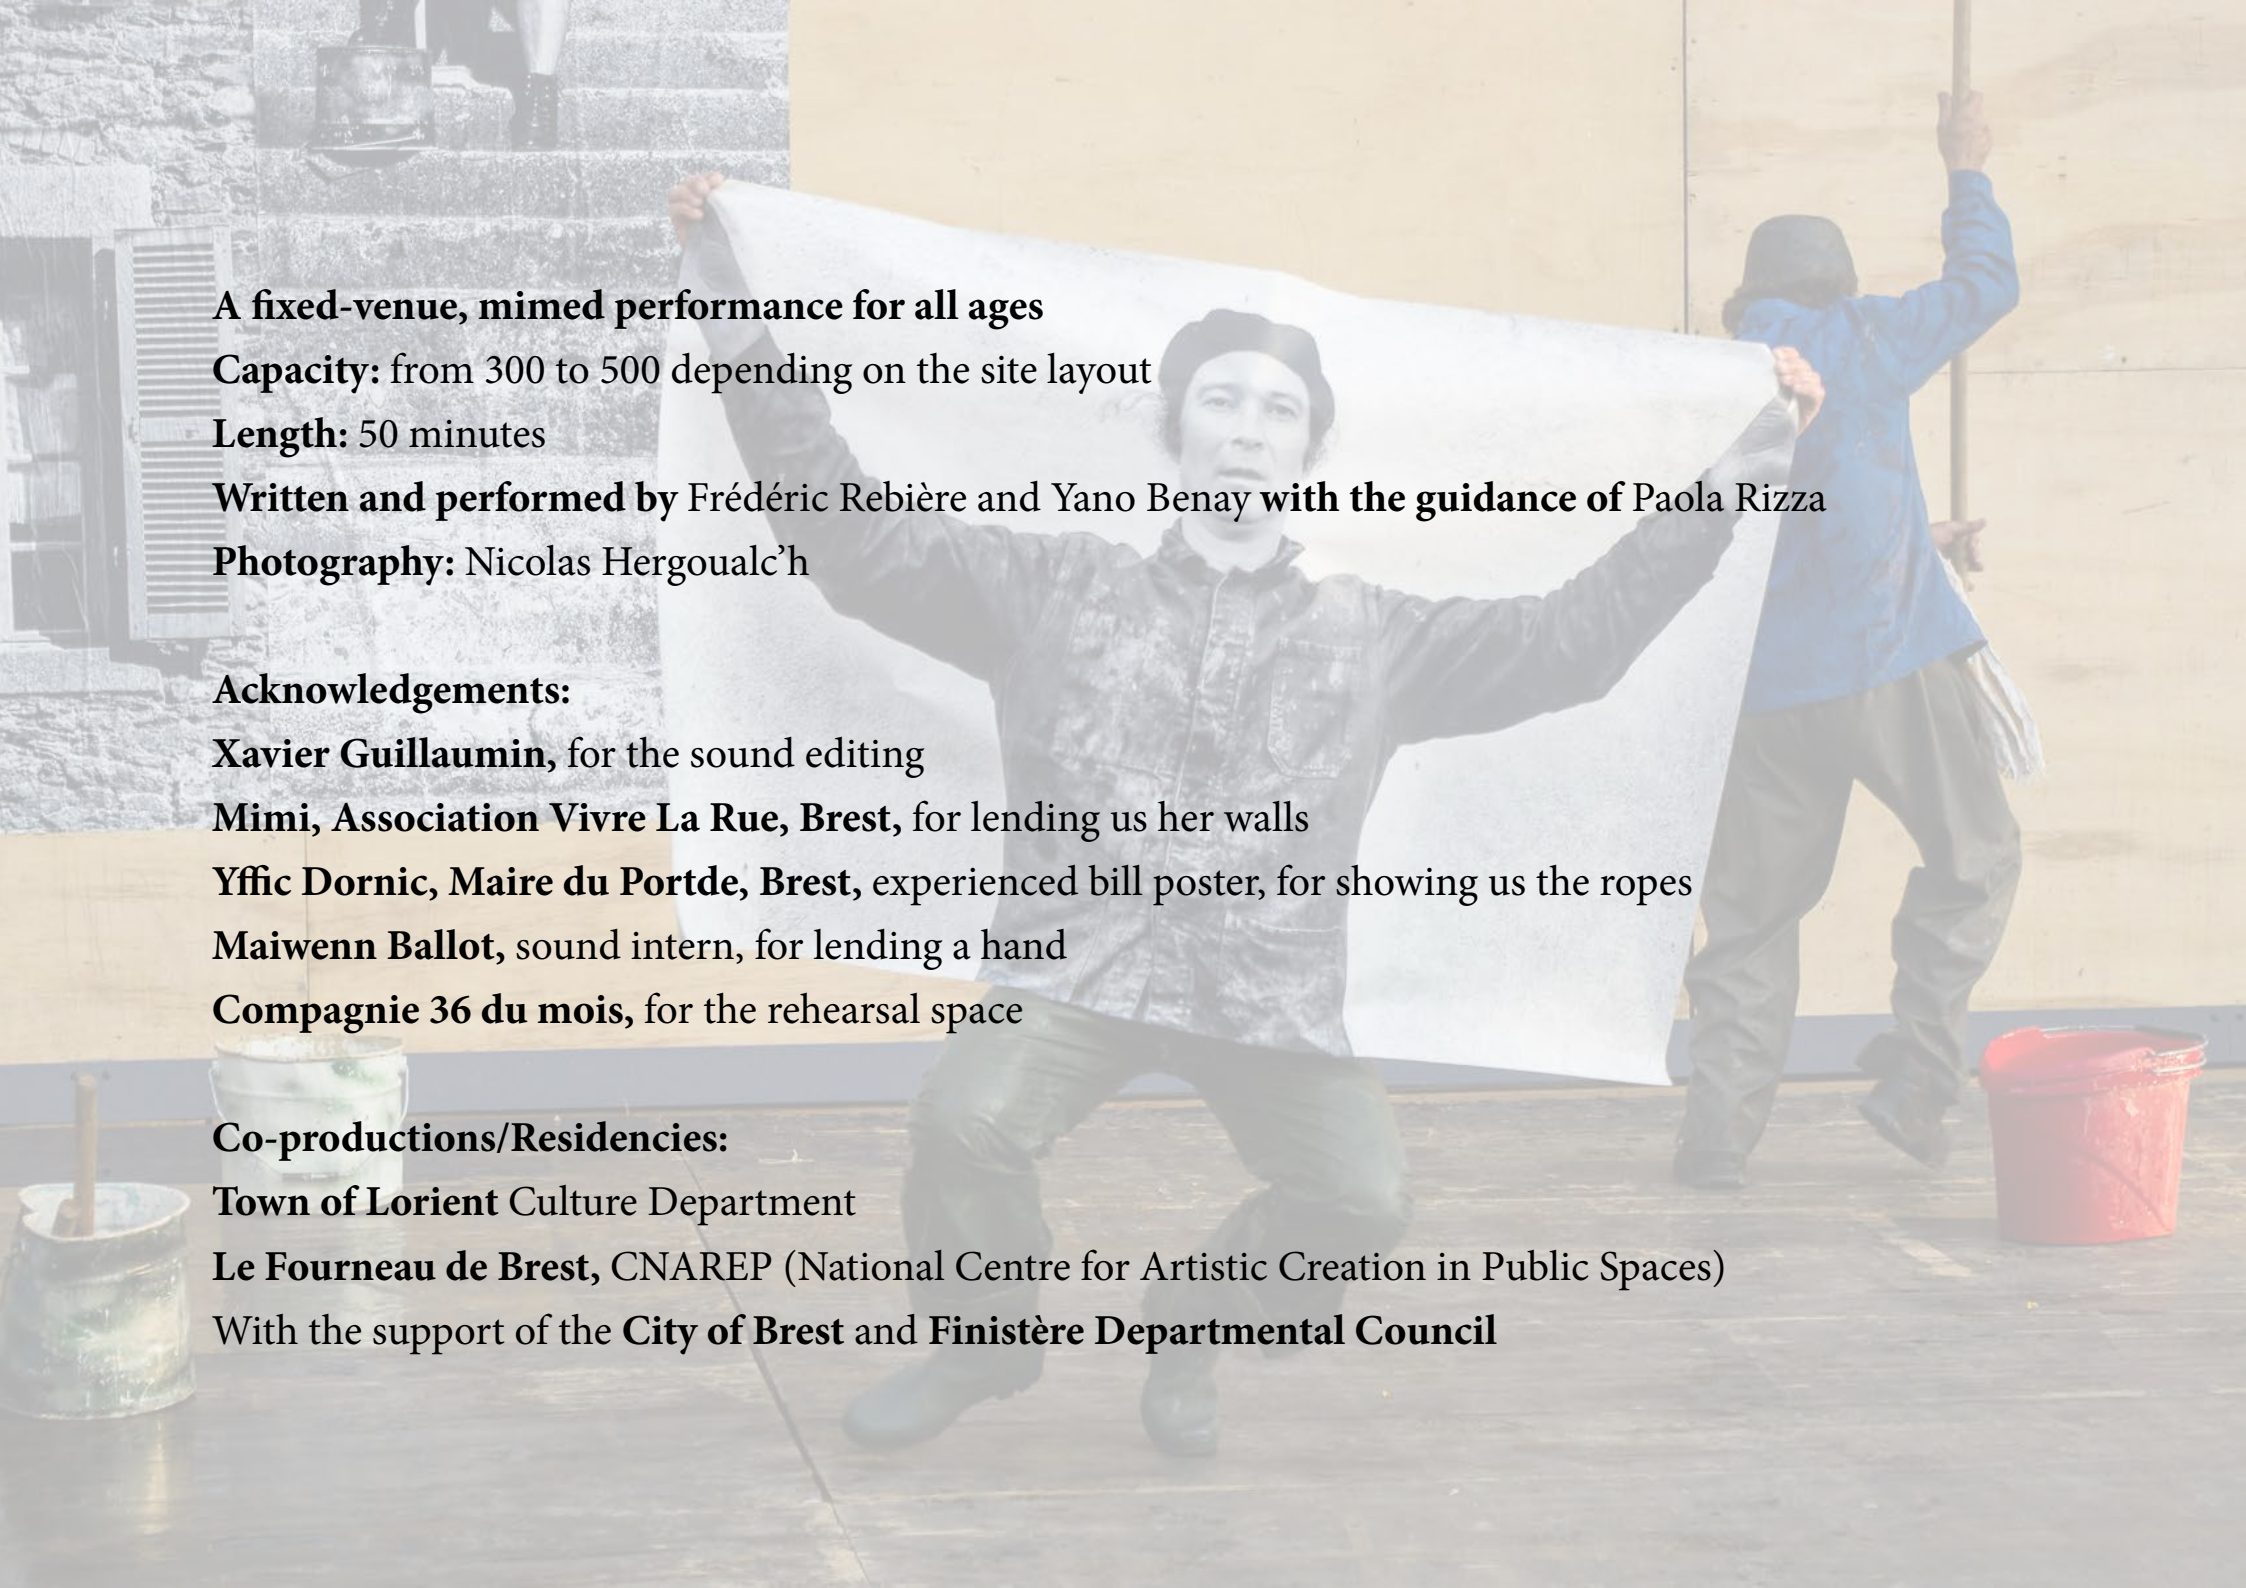

As they work (encountering a few technical problems along the way), a dialogue emerges between the images appearing on the wall and the two characters.

A strange impression comes over the audience as the images suddenly gain meaning and begin to tell a story.

In the end, the jumble of images reveals a surrealist, poetic and burlesque work of art.

A snapshot of life, or a dream: maybe that of the bill posters themselves!

A person in a dark jacket and cap is holding a large white sheet in a workshop. Another person in a blue jacket is visible in the background, also holding a sheet. There are paint buckets and a wooden wall in the scene.

A fixed-venue, mimed performance for all ages
